HAPPENING IN SIAM

Asaha Bucha Day

10 July 2025

This important public holiday in Thailand commemorates the day when the Lord Buddha delivered his first sermon at Benares, India, over 2,500 years ago. The date of Asahna Bucha is determined by the waxing moon and lunar calendar, and typically falls in July or August. The Buddha's sermon marked the birth of the Dharma, the core doctrine of Buddhism, which is symbolised by the Dharmachakra, also known as the Wheel of Life, the Wheel of Law or the Wheel of Doctrine. This sacred symbol can be seen on flags adorning temples and buildings throughout Thailand. Images or sculptures of deer, representing the site of the sermon, are commonly displayed in temples and Buddhist art.

As with many Buddhist festivals, Thai devotees celebrate Asahna Bucha (also written as Asalha Puja and other combinations) by making merit and visiting their local wat (temple). One traditional offering is the donation of candles, a custom that originated in pre-electricity times to provide light during the darker days of the rainy season. Candlelight processions are held in various towns across Thailand to mark the occasion. Worshippers also engage in 'wian tian', a sacred ritual involving walking clockwise around the temple three times with a lit candle, lotus flowers and incense in hand. The following day is also significant, marking the start of the three-month 'Phansa' period, known as 'Buddhist Lent'.

Khao Phansa Day

11 July 2025

Khao Phansa Day, observed the day after Asahna Bucha, marks the beginning of Phansa, the three-month Buddhist rains retreat. Often referred to as ‘Buddhist Lent’, this period traditionally sees monks remain within the temple rather than travelling. Even before the time of Buddha, ascetics and holy men observed this retreat during the rainy season to avoid damaging crops and young plants. Buddhism in Thailand has preserved this ancient practice, and while monks may still be seen outside during the day, they are required to reside at the same temple each night throughout the Phansa period.

This tradition underscores the deep connection between Buddhist practice and seasonal rhythms in Thai culture, offering a time of reflection, learning, and spiritual focus for both monks and laypeople.

King Maha Vajiralongkorn's Birthday

28 July 2024

King Vajiralongkorn was born in Bangkok on 28 July 1952. From 2017 onwards, his birthday has been observed annually as a public holiday in Thailand.

Following the passing of his father on 13 October, the Crown Prince did not immediately accept the crown. Instead, he informed the leader of the ruling military junta and the Thai parliament that he wished to take time to mourn before accepting the invitation to ascend the throne. The Royal Cremation Ceremony will be held at Sanam Luang, the royal ceremonial ground in front of the Grand Palace.

Queen Mother Sirikit's Birthday and Thailand Mother's Day

12 August 2024

12 August is observed annually as a public holiday in Thailand in honour of Her Majesty Queen Sirikit's birthday. Revered as the 'Mother of the Nation', HM Queen Sirikit's is also celebrated as Mother's Day (Wan Mae) in Thailand. Born on 12 August 1932, Her Majesty married HM King Bhumibol Adulyadej on 28 April 1950. Renowned for her charitable work, Queen Sirikit has served as the honorary president of the Thai Red Cross Society since 1956.

In recent years, Her Majesty's public appearances have been limited due to health concerns. A number of commemorative events are held throughout the country to honour her birthday, including merit-making ceremonies at various temples. Portraits of HM Queen Sirikit are prominently displayed at schools, government offices and temples. Her royal blue flag (blue symbolising Friday, the day of her birth) is commonly seen outside both commercial and private properties.

LOCAL MYTHS: The Intrinsic Aesthetic

Amidst an ever-evolving cultural landscape shaped by the aftermath of a global pandemic and ongoing geopolitical and economic tensions, the lines of power and influence are increasingly complex. The world is no longer defined by a single centre but by a plurality of ideas, lifestyles and artistic expressions deeply rooted in local contexts. Once seen as peripheral, these regions are now acknowledged as rich sources of knowledge, beauty and creativity.

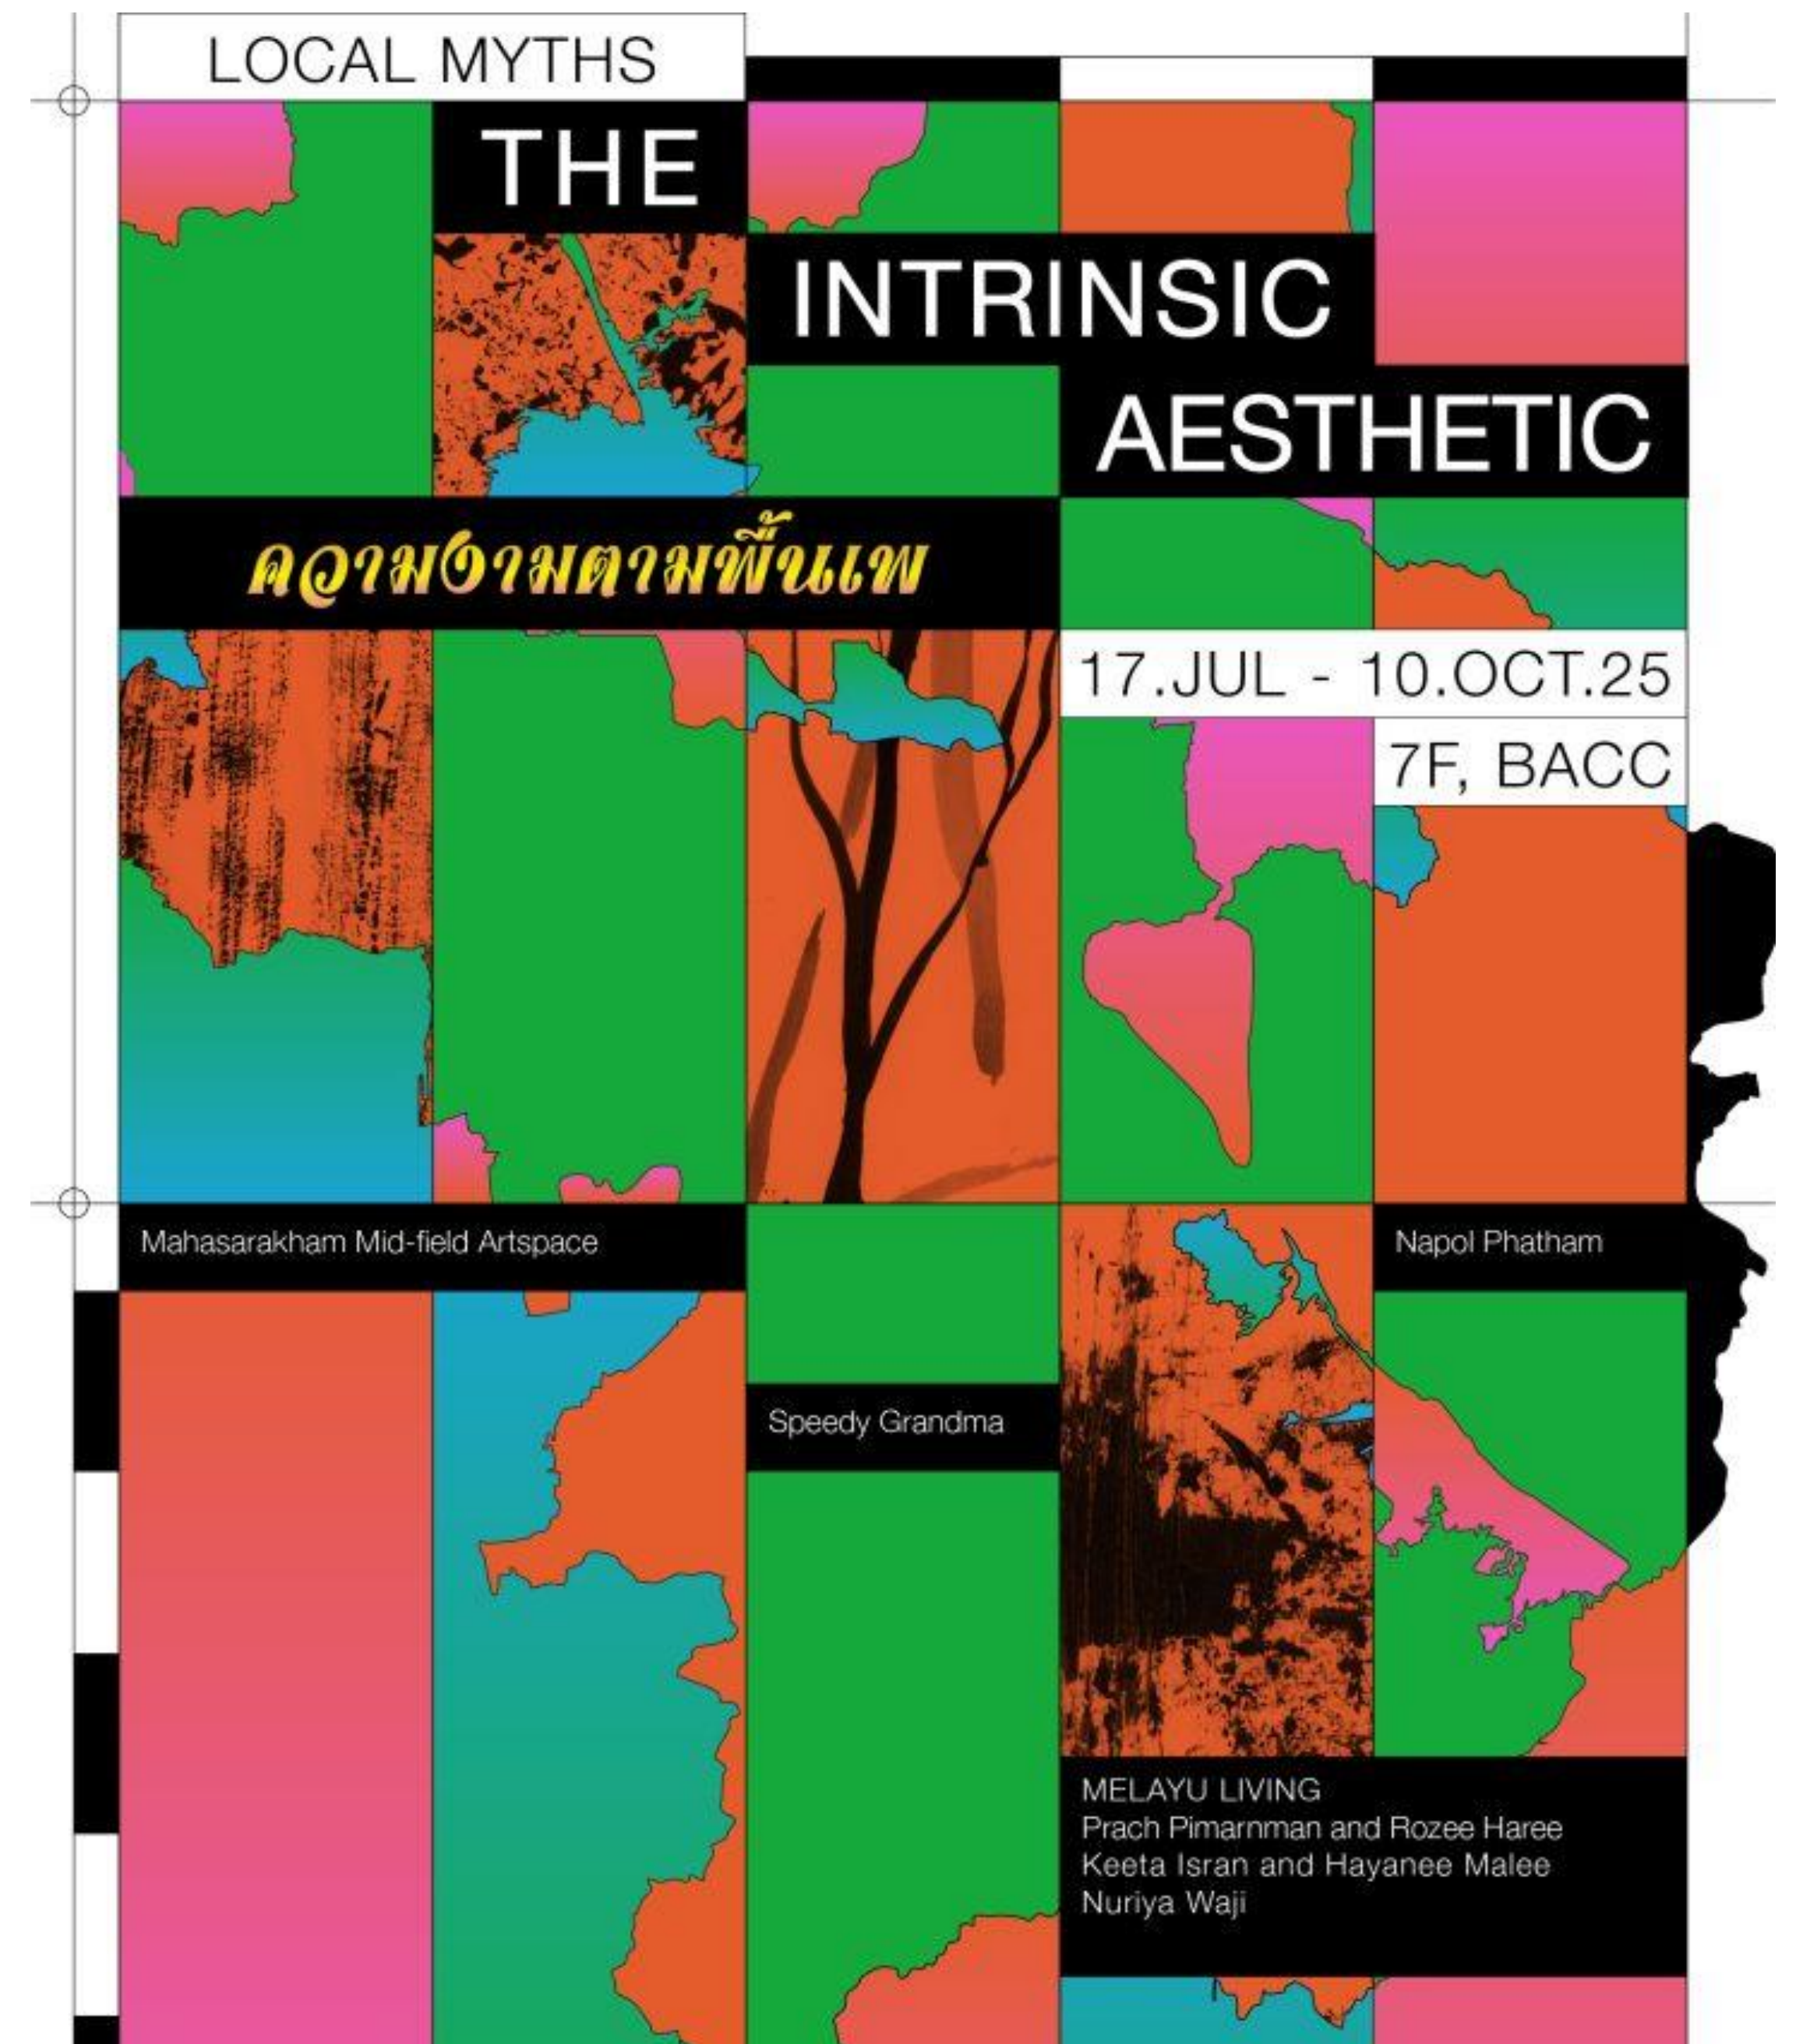

Set within this dynamic context, The Intrinsic Aesthetic provides the conceptual framework for a new initiative by the Bangkok Art and Culture Centre (BACC). The exhibition explores beauty born organically from the socio-cultural fabric of local communities, through myths, folktales, belief systems and daily life. It presents an aesthetic not tailored for global markets, but one that emerges from deep-rooted connections to land and sky, language and collective memory.

Date: 17 July–10 October 2025

Time: 10:00–20:00 | Tuesday–Sunday (Closed on Mondays)

Admission: Free

Location: Main Exhibition Gallery, Floor 7, Bangkok Art and Culture Centre

What unites regimes across geographies today is not ideology alone, but a shared infrastructure – of arms, surveillance, trade and silence. Constellation of Complicity examines both formal and informal alignments between authoritarian states through the lens of artists who have lived under – or in exile from – their consequences.

Rather than simply illustrating trauma, the exhibition offers a counter-cartography: tracing how state violence mutates, circulates and replicates, and how resistance reverberates across borders. The title, Constellation of Complicity, embodies this dual gesture: revealing networks of authoritarian collaboration while imagining new forms of cross-border solidarity. Here, aesthetics function not merely as metaphor, but as method – evidentiary, ritual, forensic and speculative.

KHON: Epic Thai Masked Performance 2025

Khon is a traditional Thai dance that fuses elements of drama and movement. Although its exact origins remain uncertain, it is referenced in the Thai literary work Lilit Phra Lo (c. 1529), predating the reign of King Narai Maharaj.

By the 17th century, Thai theatrical art had reached an advanced stage of development. In 1687, Louis XIV of France dispatched diplomat Simon de la Loubère to the Kingdom of Siam. In his renowned account Du Royaume de Siam, La Loubère documented his observations of classic Siamese theatre, including an epic battle scene from a Khon performance.
